COMIC SUPPLEMENT

Oddities in Day's Happenings Recorded While Parade Was in Progress.

When every newspaperman in the city yesterday was alert for assassina tions, murders, robberies, assaults, drunkeness, fires and accidents, the following happenings were reported

A tall, sunburned soldier with rifle and haversack pushed his way under the ropes and attempted to cross the you!" yelled a policeman

"Where are you going?"
"Across the street," replied the "Who are you anyway?" demanded the policeman.

"Oh officer," smiled the soldier,
"I am a Boy Scout and entitled to cross the street." He went.

Shrill Command Effective.

A mite of a Boy Scout was on duty at Ninth and the Avenue. The ropes holding back the crowd broke, and people poured out into the street. Policemen, soldiers and those favored individuals who wore red badges toiled to push the crowd behind the toiled to push the crowd behind the ropes. Then the tiny Boy Scout came to the rescue. "Get back there," he shrilled, and while the crowd was forced to lavgh at a fifty-pound boy trying to do the work of dozens of grown men, they were pushed back.

A representative of a Washington newspaper wore in a exposed position the gloriously red press badges given e representatives. Passing just e the ropes, he heard some one "I bet those tailors who advertise like that to have your clothe pressed have to pay for it."

Just Plain Dog.

Yet another. During a long break in the parade, when people were beginning restless, a little yellow dog, dirty, ugly, crept under the ropes and trotted to the center of the Avenue about midway between the soldiers bounding the break in the column. His head seemed lifted higher and the tiredness apparently had saken him, for proudly he marche up the Avenue. No individual or body of men got a louder cheer than the little yellow dog.

Once again. When the fife and drum corps of the Washington graded schools was seen short distance away, some brigh-oul remarked: "Oh! lookit the suffragists." The boys were costumed in the baggy trousers of the Zouaves.

After the bands had played cor sistently "Dixie," "Maryland, My Maryland," and "Hail to the Chief," one enterprising leader had "Pretty Baby" performed. Immediately the entire regiment of soldiers forgot military tactics and began executing the latest steps learned on the Mexican border. That band returned to the venth and the Avenue there came b bing a wooden apex surmounted by a sign "Postoffice." Attention was de-tracted from the parade until it was seen that the "Postoffice" was not being carried away by automobile bandits, but by Boy Scouts who de-sired a convenient headquarters.

Participation in Parade Results in No III Effects.

Standing in side streets for hours awaiting orders to "form," and thence marching a couple of miles in the inaugural parade, had no bad effects on the scores of high school cadets who participated in yesterday's ceremonies. "The boys came through fine and school officials are proud of them, as all Washington should be," stated As-sistant Superintendent Kramer, in charge of military affairs in the achools, today.
